

In Our Opinion

Prosecutors, police found justice

High-profile murder cases always make big headlines and attract a lot of attention. The capital murder trial of Thomas "Bart" Whitaker in Fort Bend County was no exception.

We want to note the work put into the prosecution of this case, particularly that of the Fort Bend County District Attorney's prosecution team, lead prosecutor Fred Felcman and prosecutor Jeff Strange, and the work of the Sugar Land Police Department.

From the evidence presented, it was clear that investigators had been thorough and found an extraordinary amount of information in this case.

As well, the prosecution team successfully laid out the evidence and reached the final and just verdict.

The citizens of Fort Bend County and the city of Sugar Land should take note that their interests were well-represented in the pursuit of justice in this case.